at 0400 on Saturday 03 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunniest and warmest in west and north today. Frosty tonight.

Today:
Some eastern and southeastern areas probably keeping a fair amount of cloud, making for a rather chilly feel. Elsewhere, early patchy cloud and any fog should clear to give prolonged sunshine for many, and feeling reasonably warm by afternoon.

Tonight:
The far east and southeast still rather cloudy, and turning increasingly cloudy for some northwestern areas, keeping these areas mostly frost-free. Elsewhere clear skies leading to frost and patchy fog.

Sunday:
Sunny for many southern and central areas, somewhat warmer too. Cloudier skies followed by bands of rain across northern UK; snow and gales in places later and particularly overnight.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Exceptionally cold for April with gales and frequent wintry showers for many western, northern, and eastern peripheries of the UK. Sunny spells elsewhere with isolated snow showers. Steadily improving Wednesday.
